EDITOR'S LETTER

We would like to make you aware of the Genealogical Conference to be held in Orlando, on November 6 and 7, 1992. The sponsor is the Florida State Genealogical Society, P. O. Box 10249, Tallahassee, FL 32302. The registration fee is $45.00 and it includes the banquet on Friday night and the luncheon on Saturday.

For detailed information write to the Society and they will send you the paper work you need to register.

The Cuban Genealogical Society is planning on attending and having a display table at this conference.

We also would like to ask the members to help us get copies of the articles and books that they can find in libraries that are close to them. We cannot travel to all the libraries that have information to get these copies, so the members living close to the libraries would do a great job helping us to accumulate information useful to the members.

Some libraries that have a great amount of information about Cuba and Cuban genealogy are: Los Angeles Public Library; Tulane Library; Allen County Public Library; University of Miami Library; Tampa University Library. Any other library might also have information that can be very useful to us; just check the catalog listing.

We would really appreciate this help form you.

Christopher Columbus: The Journal of his First Voyage

by Gerardo Sierra

When Christopher Columbus returned from his first voyage to America and was received by Ferdinand and Isabelle in Barcelona, he presented them with the holograph original of his log book, which he had kept from day to day. The Sovereigns did not return the manuscript to Columbus. They retained it and in exchange, by order of Isabelle, a copy was sent to the admiral shortly before he sailed on his second voyage. This copy had been done by two scribes in the utmost secrecy, to prevent Portuguese spies from gaining knowledge of its contents.

Columbus and his descendants must have treasured the Barcelona manuscript and must have kept it in the family archives. It was probably this copy which Luis Columbus, Christopher's grandson, had in his possession in 1554, when he was granted permission to publish the Journal. This printing, for some unknown reason, was never carried out. The Journal was not printed and we shall never know its full contents, since both the holograph original and the Barcelona copy have disappeared.

The only text of Columbus' diary has come down to us in an abstract form by the hand of the Dominican historian Bartolomé de Las Casas. It may be that Las Casas used the Barcelona copy to make his extractions, for he was well acquainted with Christopher's sons, Diego and Fernando, and with Diego's wife Doña María de Toledo. Through them he may have had access to the family archives. It appears more likely that he made use of a transcript of the Barcelona manuscript which he found in Fernando's library.

Fernando Columbus, a man of keen intellect, spent his life and income collecting books. At his death, his library contained more than 15,000 volumes and many valuable manuscripts. In his will, made in 1539, Fernando left his library to his nephew Luis, with the provision that if the child showed no inclination to provide for the upkeep of the library it should be turned over to the chapter of the Seville Cathedral. At the time, Luis was under age and residing in Santo Domingo and therefore could do nothing about the inheritance. But in 1544 Maria de Toledo, acting on the suggestion of her Brother Antonio (who was a Dominican priest), entrusted the care of the library to the Dominican monastery of San Pablo. Bartolomé de Las Casas resided in this monastery when he was in Seville. It was there that he was consecrated Bishop of Chiapas on March 30, 1544. But he was unable to make much use of the library then, since it was not transferred to San Pablo until June of that year. Furthermore, four weeks later Las Casas, Maria de Toledo, and her brother Antonio sailed from Sanlucar de Barrameda to Santo Domingo.

In 1552, however, Las Casas spent most of the year in the monastery of San Pablo. The library was still there, although the chapter of the Seville Cathedral had obtained a court order for its transfer. But the library was not moved until the end of that year. It was in this move that several books and manuscripts disappeared. The year of 1552 was one of feverish activity for Las Casas. He supervised the printing of several of his works and he also began to write his OPUS MAGNUMS, the Historia de las Indias, which he did not complete until six years later in Valladolid.

Before beginning to write his Historia, like any conscientious historian Las Casas collected material and took notes. Naturally a very important source of information for him was Columbus' diary. From the manuscript which he found in Fernando's library, he copied word for word those parts which he thought of special interest, and abridged other sections which seemed less important. Of course, he also skipped anything that touched the church or the Spanish people. He added a considerable number of marginal notes. He also copied an account of Columbus' third voyage.

Several historians — French, German, English and American — have accused Las Casas of tampering with the spirit of the Journal; of falsifying its contents to suit his own views and the interest of the church. The first critic to do so was Henry Vignaud. In 1930, Cecil Jane amplified Vignaud's arguments — asserting that the letter prologue which precedes the Journal is a forgery and that Columbus could not have written it, since in it Ferdinand and Isabelle are addressed as "King and Queen of the Spain", a title which was not used until later, when the union of Castile and Aragon became permanent.

The most outspoken critic of Las Casas has been the Argentinean scholar Romulo Carbia. At the Congress International des Americanistes, held in Seville in 1935, Carbia indulges in violent diatribes against the Dominican, calling him a liar and a forger. His accusations aroused strong reactions from Spanish and Catholic scholars.

Today's leading scholars accept or ignore the facts, depending on which side they are on; Catholics and Spanish accept the Las Casas version of Columbus' diary as true.

There is no doubt, however, that Las Casas did introduce remarks of his own into the text of the Journal. The reference to Florida, on November 21st, could not be the work of Columbus, since that province was not discovered until 1513 — it was evidently added by Las Casas. The historian Henry Harrise also thought that some of the place names given in the Journal probably belong to a later period. Among others, Harrise mentions Cabo Frances, on the north of Santo Domingo. The original name given by Columbus appears to have been Cabo Franco, which is preserved in the Museo Naval in Madrid. The journal also contains a number of errors of transcriptions which may be the work of Las Casas. Several of these errors concern navigation and make it difficult to follow the course set by Columbus. They usually consist in mistaking Este (East) for Oeste (West), or in giving the distances in leagues instead of miles, or vice-versa.

Other errors seem to be just slips of the pen, such as writing teniendo for temiendo (October 13th), or soldar for sondar (November 28th). There are also some unintelligible passages, probably due to missing lines and words from Las Casas text. In several instances, Las Casas experienced considerable difficulty in deciphering the text of the Journal, which he blamed on the bad handwriting of the scribe who made the copy.

Las Casas often found cause to criticize the language and style used by Columbus. In his Historia de las Indias, after quoting word by word from the journal, the Dominican sometimes added remarks like this: "These are his very words, although some of them are not in perfect Castilian since it was not the admiral's mother tongue." Las Casas evidently thought that the foreign terms or construction used by Columbus must have been Italian in origin, since he was from Genoa. Yet all of the writing to a friend in Genoa or to the Banco di San Giorgio were written in Spanish. All of the marginal notes found in his own copy of Pliny's Natural History are written in Spanish, except one in Italian. It seems that Spanish was the language in which Columbus felt most at home with when he had to set down his thoughts on paper.

The foreign words which Las Casas detected in the Journal were probably Portuguese in origin, for Menedez Pidal and San Nogueira have noticed a large number of "portuguesismos" in the Admiral's language. This is not surprising, in view of the fact that he spent seven years in Portugal — Madeira and Porto Santo — where Columbus picked up an oral knowledge of Portuguese. He does not seem to have ever learned to write it well, and he did not handle it as well as if it were his native tongue. Columbus lived at a time when the linguistic frontier between Portuguese and Castilian was vague and hard to define, and most of his "portuguesismos" appear in spelling and pronunciation. For some words common to both languages, he used only the Portuguese spelling, while for others he wrote either Portuguese or Castilian indifferently. Some of his technical terms relating to navigation may be Portuguese, if they do not belong to the "language of the galleys" — the lingua franca common to sailors of southwestern Europe. Thus baslovento (windward) and sotavento (leeward), nordestar (to decline to the northeast) and noroestar (to decline to the northwest), may be Portuguese in origin, if they are not derived from some other romance language.

Julio Guillen y Tato, director of the Museo Naval in Madrid, has made an interesting study of Columbus' nautical language. This study reveals that while in the early pages of the Journal the nautical terms are few in number, they progressively increase in the successive entries. From this, the Spanish scholar derives the impression that before 1492, Columbus was unfamiliar with the jargon of the Spanish sailors. But as he was intelligent and adaptable, he quickly learned the language of the sea.

In the early part of this Journal, Columbus uses the Arabo-Portuguese word almadia when he wished to refer to the Indian dugout. Later, however, when he has learned the native word for it, canoa, he begins to make use of it. Other Americanisms which Columbus introduced in Europe through his log-book are Cacique (local chieftain or leader), hamaca (hammock), and tiburón (shark). Today these words are an integral part of the Spanish language. During his first voyage Columbus became acquainted with tobacco, but he did not learn the word for it.

In his great undertaking, Columbus was thoroughly convinced that God was on his side and even performed miracles on his behalf. Thus on his outward journey when the sailors began to complain about the smooth sea and the lack of wind (September 23rd), fearing that under such conditions they would never be able to return to Spain, the sea suddenly rose and waves swelled and the men stopped grumbling. The admiral interpreted this event as an act of the Divine Providence and compared it to the miracle of the Red Sea, when gigantic waves destroyed the Pharaoh's army after the Jews had reached land and safety.

In 1701, Martín Fernández de Navarrete discovered the Las Casas abstract in the library of the Duque del Infantado, and published it in 1825 in the first volume of his Colección de Viajes. Navarrete had served in the Spanish navy, so in his edition of the Journal he also corrected obvious errors relating to navigation. But he was not a trained paleographer, and his transcription contains a number of mis-readings.

A more satisfactory edition of the Journal was included in the first volume of the Raccolta Colombiana in 1892. It was the work of Cesare de Lloïlis, chief editor of the Raccolta and of Julian Paz, archivist of the House of Alva. The Raccolta edition is by no means perfect, as Professor Emiliano Jos has pointed out, but it is textually superior to Navarrete's.

Since the end of the Spanish Civil War, the Journal has enjoyed considerable popularity in the Hispanic world, and no less than five editions of it have appeared in the last twenty years.

The most useful work is that prepared by Julio Guillen, which contains valuable footnotes. Another is a deluxe edition, beautifully illustrated, with an introduction by Gregorio Maranon. All these editions followed Navarrete's transcription.

L. A. Vigneras published a version of the Journal, based on the Cecil Jane translation (which he considered to be the best of the English versions). Jane, a professor at Oxford University, had a fine command of the Spanish language, but he knew little about navigation, flora, and fauna. Furthermore, his untimely death kept him from revising his translation, correcting obvious errors, and reinserting missing lines. No doubt he would have achieved a more satisfactory result if he had had the time to complete it.

In preparing his edition of the Columbus journal, L. A. Vignera (instead of using the text printed by Navarrete in 1825, as most translators have done) relied on the transcription made in 1892 by Cesare de Lollis and Julian Paz for the Raccolta Colombiana, which is far superior. He also checked doubtful readings with the Las Casas manuscript, now in the Biblioteca Nacional in Madrid. For the sake of clarity, he has added footnotes where the text seemed to require it. For identification of places and names, he relied chiefly on Morrison. But he also consulted the work of Julio Guillen, Morales Pedroso and others. He also added a bibliography of books and articles dealing with the Journal.

In the introduction to his work, L. A. Vigneras said "I wish to express my gratitude for greatly facilitating my task to the staff of the Archivo General de Indias in Seville, the Sociedade de Geografia in Lisbon, and the Museo Naval in Madrid. Professor M. Jimenez Fernández of the University of Seville has generously provided me with much useful information concerning the whereabouts of Bartolomé de Las Casas in 1544 and 1552. Comandante A. Teixeira de Mota of the Portuguese Naval Academy, Almirante Julio Guillen, director of the Museo Naval, and Teniente de Navio Roberto Barreiro-Meiro, also of the Museo Naval, have been most kind in helping me grasp the meaning of the nautical terms found in the Journal." All of these credits prove the extensive research and care that L. A. Vigeras took in this goal of writing an accurate version of the travels of Columbus.

With Columbus, many other men took sail into the unknown seas. They too were courageous and in many ways discoverers also. Following is a list of the one hundred and eleven men that accompanied Columbus in his first trip to the Americas.

This list appears in the Family Record of the Sierra-Vinas and Lopez-Dubec families. There are 39 names marked with an X. This indicates those that were "marrano"; in other words Jews that had been converted to Catholicism, or Conversos. The word marrano was substituted with the word "criminal" by the Spanish authorities documenting the event. The roll in the hands of the Duchess of Alba had all the names with the "criminal" word by them erased, in order to not include any "marrano" person in the discovery, and therefore showing only seventy two men accompanying Columbus in his journey.

Parish Register of Espiritu Santo, Habana, Cuba

Marriages 1674 to 1891

The transcription from the parish of Espiritu Santo, in the city of Habana, are of selected families that were being studied at the time by Francisco Xavier de Santa Cruz and his associates.

The first 15 books of marriages of the parish register including the years 1674 to 1891 were used in the extraction. The order of the entries was alphabetical, by the last name of one of the spouses, since this order was confusing in our format, we have sorted them in chronological order.

This listing will be continued in a future issues of REVISTA.

The information contained in the following listing has the same format as previously used. To recap: The surname and given name are found first, followed by the sex of the individual, the date of the marriage, a letter indicating whether the individual listed is the one being married (M), or is associated genealogically (G); this G follows the names of parents or other spouses and witnesses. The numbers at the very end refer to the page and entry number of the original transcription. These are helpful in looking at the individuals identified in a given entry and may also be used for further reference in corresponding with CGS to get a printout of the entry as it appears in the original.

SOCIETY NOTES:

Ref: "Enrique Villuendas: His Family, Genealogical Study" in REVISTA v. 5 (April 1992), pp. 12-18, (publication of the Cuban Genealogical Society) at p. 13-14.

This article makes reference to Felicitas María del Carmen Gayarre y Cockram, who was born in Pensacola, Florida on February 3, 1811, and baptized in the Parish of San Miguel (location??) on July 4, 1811, and the baptism recorded in "the book of baptism for the Army in Louisiana" in the Cathedral of La Habana. Felicitas María Gayarre y Cockram was the daughter of Antonio Gayarre y Grampe (sic, should be de Grand Pre), born in New Orleans and María de los Angeles Cockram y Antor, born at Pensacola.

Does anyone have any further information regarding this "the book of baptism for the Army in Louisiana" in the Cathedral of La Habana?

Where is this baptismal register now? Has it been copied or micro-filmed? Is it available to researchers, and is it indexed? There are many genealogists in Louisiana interested in the contents of this baptismal register.

Contact Augusta B. Elmwood, 1514 St. Roch Avenue, New Orleans, La 70117; or Paul Newfield III, 3016 45th Street Metairie, Louisiana 70001

P.S.: Persons interested in the Gayarre and Grand Pre families should note that these two families left a deep record trail in Louisiana during the 18th and 19th centuries.

To answer August's questions:

The parish of San Miguel was located in Pensacola, where Felicitas María was born.

The book of baptisms for the Army in Louisiana is believed to be in the Cathedral of Habana to this day. The Spanish government did not move to Spain any church register at the time of Cuba's separation from Spain.

There have been many attempts to microfilm the records in Cuba, but it has always been unsuccessful. The Cuban government will not allow any filming done.
